Apart from the 46 countries in Europe there are countries that share territory in both Asia and Europe such as Russia, Kazakhstan, Azerbaijan, Georgia, and Turkey are transcontinental countries, taking the total number of countries to 51.

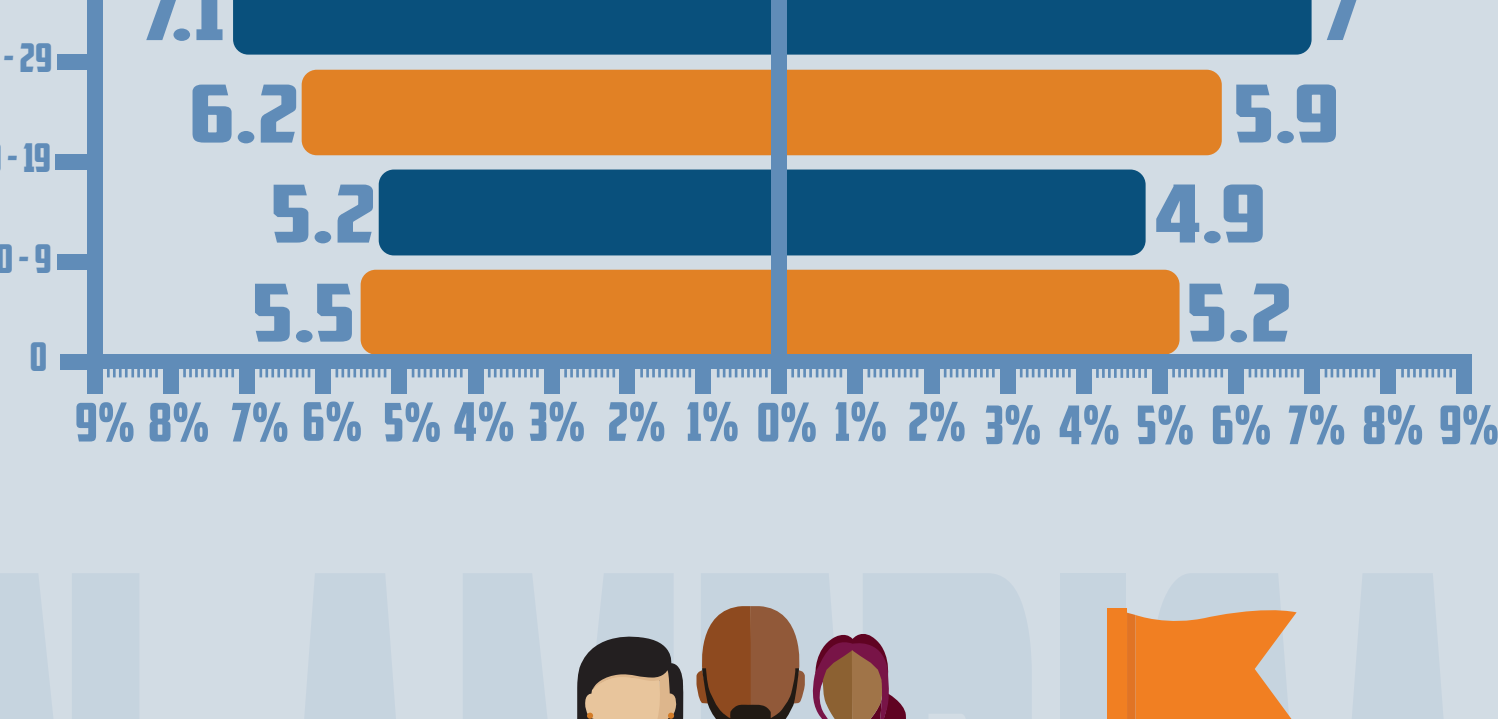

Europe has both the biggest country and the smallest country. Russia is the biggest stretching over 17.1 million km².

While the Vatican City covers a small amount of land in Italy, 0.44 km².

It's projected that Europe will lose 30 million people of working age by 2050.

Most European countries are dealing with the effects of an aging population, including fertility rates below replacement level as fewer women have children in favor of a career.

North America covers an area of about 24,709,000 square kilometers (9,540,000 square miles), about 16.5% of the earth's land area and about 4.8% of its total surface.

North America is the third largest continent by area, following Asia and Africa, and the fourth by population after Asia, Africa, and Europe.

North America was reached by its first human populations during the last glacial period, via crossing the Bering land bridge approximately 40,000 to 17,000 years ago. The so-called Paleo-Indian period is taken to have lasted until about 10,000 years ago.

The African population is fast growing with an estimated number of 1.3 billion people. This is detected with visible growth in the continent's most populous nations with Nigeria - 90,076,000, Ethiopia - 90,076,000 and Egypt - 88,523,000.

In certain parts of the continent, there has been an increase in Asian and European settlers, which has also served to boost the population statistics as a whole.

Africa's Nigeria is currently one of the most populous countries on earth, and as China's population shrinks and India plateaus, Nigeria will reach nearly 1 billion people by 2100 and come close to surpassing China. This is pretty amazing considering the country is about the size of Texas.

Geographical Asia is a cultural artifact of European conceptions of the world, beginning with the Ancient Greeks, being imposed onto other cultures, an imprecise concept causing endemic contention about what it means.

Asia has the largest continental economy by both GDP Nominal and PPP in the world, and is the fastest growing economic region. As of 2018, the largest economies in Asia are China, Japan, India and Russia.

Asia is home to several language families and many language isolates. Most Asian countries have more than one language that is natively spoken. For instance, more than 600 languages in Indonesia, 800 languages spoken in India.

While most of South America was liberated from the colonial powers of Spain and Portugal, two small areas of the continent are still administered by European countries, and in terms of per capita income are the wealthiest areas of the continent.

There is a significant difference in terms of the wealth of the population in different countries on the continent, with Chile's population generating the highest Gross Domestic Product per capita, at $23,969, while Bolivia's population is the lowest, at just $7,190 per capita.

Religion is an important part of the culture in South America, and across the continent, around 90% of people identify themselves as Christians. 82% of the continent's population consider themselves to be Roman Catholic.

The first settlers of Australia, New Guinea, and the large islands just to the east arrived more than 60,000 years ago. Oceania was first explored by Europeans from the 16th century onward.

The arrival of European settlers in subsequent centuries resulted in a significant alteration in the social and political landscape of Oceania. In more contemporary times there has been increasing discussion on national flags and a desire to display their distinguishable and individualistic identity.

The predominant religion in Oceania is Christianity (73%). A 2011 survey found that 92% in Melanesia, 93% in Micronesia and 96% in Polynesia described themselves as Christians.
